

CoHealth is a mobile platform that gives healthcare consumers access to tools and resources developed by community healthcare partners. We provide healthcare consumers with a single point of access for all of their healthcare needs. We connect them to tools and resources from healthcare organizations (payers, providers, tech companies, medical device companies, foundations) to help manage and coordinate care. CoHealth is a startup that was founded in 2016 and is currently live in over 20 health systems across Canada and the US. Our office is located at 88 College St.

We are looking for a self-starting student who is interested in being apart of a digital health startup. The role would include:

- Digitize educational materials received directly from our healthcare partners for their patients and caregivers to use.
- Perform and ensure delivery of quality, digital educational materials on our platform for health consumers across North America to view.
- Meet deadlines set by management for clients/key stakeholders to ensure seamless implementation.
- Perform market research to ensure industry standards are exceeded.

We are looking for someone with the basic knowledge of healthcare. But most importantly, we are looking for somebody who is willing to work hard, learn a lot, and have fun along the way.
